Market Report

by Tim LaPointe
New England Numismatist

At the shows

Two major shows dominated the numismatic scene since our last report and several signs point to a strengthening market. Trading activity was brisk at both the Middle Atlantic Association convention held in Washington, D.C., and the Grand Central Show, featuring New England Rare Coin Galleries' Grand Central Sale, held in New York City. Want Lists were longer than in previous months and collector/investors appeared more willing to purchase coins at present levels. Some experts believe these buyers are anticipating price increases in several areas.

As in the past, rarities drew impressive prices at both events. One highlight at the Grand Central Sale, for example, was a 1907 High Relief Saint-Gaudens Double Eagle in MS-65. This specimen, one of the first 20 pieces struck, was personally presented to George Cabot Lodge at a luncheon in 1907 by President Theodore Roosevelt. After spirited bidding, the famous coin drew $12,500. Another top item was a 1919 Walking Liberty Half Dollar, in MS-63 condition, which commanded $5,000. Several world coins also drew collector attention, including an exceedingly rare 1916 Chinese Gold Dollar in MS-60, which traded hands for $4,750, and an unusual 1486 Austrian Guldiner in EF-45, which sold for $3,000.

Gold

Gold bullion has seen wide price swings during the past two months. In our last issue, gold was at the $440 level, up $34 from the previous report. This month, gold is back down around $405 per ounce. As expected, these fluctuations have effected bullion-related items accordingly. But collectible gold coins, particularly better-date and high-quality common-date pieces, continue to hold steady despite this latest drop. One example of this trend is a 1915 Saint-Gaudens

Double Eagle in MS-65 which recently traded for $3,000 in a dealer-to-dealer transaction.

Silver

Silver bullion has taken a 70-cent nosedive since our last report, settling at the $8.30 level. In the collectible arena, high-quality silver dollars continue to dominate trading activity. Again, this trend was evidenced at the Grand Central Sale when an 1895 Morgan Dollar, Proof-60, commanded $10,000. Long considered "the king of the Morgan Dollar series," this piece drew tremendous bidder attention before the final offer was accepted. One other rarity that caused a stir was an extremely elusive 1838-0 No Stars Seated Dime, in MS-65, that traded for $6,750. In the area of type silver, dealers are still unsuccessfully searching for Uncirculated specimens. At current levels, these coins continue to remain elusive.

Copper

This area of the market has been relatively quiet during the past few weeks, with most buyer attention concentrated on better-date Half Cents and Large Cents in lower grades. Several collectors are still attempting to complete a date and mintmark set of both series.

Commemoratives

An increasing number of Want Lists now include silver commemoratives in MS-65 condition or above, and gold commemoratives in EF to AU condition. Demand is particularly strong for 1893 Isabella Quarters in Uncirculated condition. At the Grand Central Sale, one specimen in MS-65 commanded $3,750.

Currency

This collectible area appears to be firming up more than in recent months, since prices are either stabilized at current levels or rising. Few series have seen price drops during the past two weeks. Lower-quality notes in Choice condition are expected to see marked upward movement, since market analysts believe they "overreacted" to last year's downward swing in prices. In general, high-quality notes are still elusive at these low levels. Uncut sheets are possibly enjoying the

Barber Coinage: A Technical Achievement

by Jonathan E. Danch,
New England Numismatic Staff
with Ann Marie Reis

Controversial beginnings have done little to stop the Barber coinage of 1892 from becoming extremely popular in today's numismatic arena. For years these coins — the dime, quarter and half dollar — were far from admired and rarely collected. Experts viewed them as uninteresting and disappointing, clearly not works of great numismatic art.

Within the last two decades, however, hobbyists have come to fully appreciate the dignified, harmonious designs on these pieces, created by Mint Engraver Charles E. Barber. Collectors are now quick to applaud the carefully executed planes of relief that enhance the interior detail of the coins. In fact, the technical expertise displayed on these specimens is held in the highest regard among specialists. As a result, high-quality examples continue to command handsome premiums when they surface on the marketplace.

Barber coinage is also significant for another reason. For perhaps the last time in the history of American numismatics, "practicality" took almost complete precedence over "aesthetics" in a coin design. Barber, a consummate craftsman, took special pride in creating coins that were functional, durable and easily produced. He was far less concerned with designing a merely beautiful piece. In this particular area, Barber more than surpassed his goal with the 1892 coins. The triad glided off the presses with no major problems, and the designs stood the wearing demands of circulation unusually well.

But when two other coin series were up for revision in 1907, about 15 years later, the scale had tipped considerably. Instead of following tradition and using a Mint engraver to create the designs, Treasury officials contracted famed sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens. The resulting pieces, the Liberty Head Eagle and Saint-Gaudens Double Eagle, were certainly not technical masterpieces, but they were extremely rich in creativity, classic beauty and extraordinary detail. They also set the 20th century numismatic revolution in motion. In spite of major objections by Barber, the next 24 years saw each of our coins redesigned by independent artists, in a style reminiscent of classic ancient Greek and Roman coinage.

Interestingly, around 1890, when officials began discussing design changes for the dime, quarter and half dollar, the Treasury attempted in vain to introduce a new level of artistic integrity to our coinage. At the time, the 1878 Morgan Dollar was considered bland and unappealing. In addition, the Seated Liberty motif, which had appeared on the dime, quarter and half dollar since 1838, was long overdue for change.

Reference books indicate that during this period, two design competitions were sponsored by the Treasury. One reportedly was a public contest in which "200 or 300 artists received honorable mention for their efforts" but no designs were approved for coinage. Another source noted that 10 distinguished artists, including Augustus Saint-Gaudens and Daniel Chester French, were invited to compete. This select group banded together and submitted a counterproposal to the Treasury before they agreed to work on sketches. Among other stipulations, they wanted the winning designs to be chosen by either presidents of art institutions or the competitors themselves rather than by Mint officials, that all artists be reimbursed for entries instead of just the winning designs, and that the same artist design both the obverse and reverse of a given coin. (Mint officials had already stated what reverse designs they wanted to see on the coins.)

Charles E. Barber (Courtesy of Coin World)

Not surprisingly, the Treasury rejected their proposal. Mint officials apparently were not ready to “go outside the family” for a coin design since, in the past, the honor virtually always went to a Mint engraver. At one point Mint Director Leach publically stated: “It is not likely that another competition will ever be tried for the production of designs for United States coins. The one just ended was too wretched a failure. The result is not very flattering to the boasted artistic development of this country.”

His reluctance also may have been colored by the fact that Barber voiced strong objections to some design suggestions offered by Saint-Gaudens. He argued that the Mint was unable to produce the artist’s ancient Greek-style motifs on existing machinery, and that the high relief designs that Saint-Gaudens proposed would cause stacking problems and a short circulation life.

Barber’s opinions carried substantial weight with Treasury officials. He had already proven himself a capable coin designer/engraver with the 1883 Liberty Head Nickel, and with numerous patterns and medals. He also had several years of experience at the Philadelphia Mint under his belt, having served as assistant engraver to his father William since 1869, and appointed chief engraver in 1890, shortly after his father’s death.

Thus, when Barber submitted pattern designs for the dime, quarter and half dollar, they were approved by Treasury officials without fanfare, probably with a sigh of relief. Interestingly, the Mint adopted a new process for making the dies for the 1892 series. The artist created his designs in larger dimensions in clay or wax, then duplicates were cast in metal. After retouches, a reducing machine transferred the design to steel, which was subsequently hardened. A variation of this process is still used today.

Greeted with disappointment

When the modified dime, quarter and half dollar were released early in 1892, both the general public and the numismatic fraternity were keenly disappointed. Publicity on the competitions had raised their hopes for truly exquisite coins. What they saw instead were pleasant, well-executed designs, far from aesthetic masterpieces. One writer in the American Journal of Numismatics summarized the prevailing attitude: “. . . in many respects these coins are an advance on what has hitherto been accomplished, but there is yet a long distance between them and the ideal national coin . . .”

With the Barber coinage, the previous trend of keeping the dime, quarter and half dollar obverses alike was maintained. Each depicts a heavy, matronly profile of Liberty facing right and wearing the Liberty cap. A laurel wreath, tied in back with a ribbon, covers the cap, and across the front of her hair is a headband with the word “LIBERTY” enclosed. On the quarter and half dollar, her profile is framed by 13 six-pointed stars, the motto “IN GOD WE TRUST,” and the date. The dime obverse simply shows the words “THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA” and the date around the profile.

Several critics argued that Barber’s interpretation of Liberty had a striking resemblance to the Morgan Dollar profile.

Many critics claimed Barber’s obverse designs lacked ingenuity, that they were merely the Morgan Dollar profile reversed, with minor changes. Others were more pointed with their complaints, stating: “The Head of Liberty is

Grading

Our grading system is patterned after that of the American Numismatic Association's numerical grading standards. Where appropriate for greatest accuracy, additional intermediate grades are also used. Our designations are:

Poor .....	1
Fair .....	2
About Good .....	3
Good .....	4,6
Very Good .....	8,10
Fine .....	12,15
Very Fine .....	20,25,30,35
Extremely Fine .....	40,45
About Uncirculated .....	50,53,55,58
Mint State .....	60,63,64,65,66,67,68,69,70
Proof .....	60,63,64,65,66,67,68,69,70

Slash grades indicate obverse/reverse designations. For example, a grade of MS-65/63 describes a coin with an obverse of Mint State-65 and a reverse of Mint State-63. Mishandled Proofs will be graded as any circulated coin, and may be classified as Proof-40 (denoting an Extremely Fine coin) or Proof-55, etc.

dignified but . . . she can hardly be called a beauty . . . there is a fullness in the upper lip which detracts from the expression, and a slight swelling on the back of the neck that led one irreverent critic to remark 'she is going to have a boil,' and another to say 'the throat is that of a gladiator.'"

Yet Barber's interpretations did, in fact, reflect the times perhaps even more than he himself realized. In 1892, the same year the coinage was released, the Columbian Exposition was held in Chicago to commemorate 300 years of American settlement. Dozens of respected artists gathered to display their work and, ironically, the dominant artistic style resembled Barber's. For example, Daniel Chester French's sculpture, Republic, was widely acclaimed and praised for its majestic elegance. This monumental structure showed a matron holding an eagle aloft in one hand and a Liberty cap in the other. She had a heavy profile and massive neck consistent with Barber's depiction of Liberty on the coinage.

Perhaps the most intriguing aspect of his obverse design is the maximum use of low relief and intrinsic balance. The sharp, rectangular dentals of the raised rim, and the strength and placement of the stars, clearly compliment the clean lines of the profile. The incuse lettering on the headband adds additional depth. One design flaw, however, is the fact that Liberty's cheek is the high point on the coin, making it vulnerable to abrasions. Some collectors believe that an MS-70 quarter or half dollar, without one or two marks on the cheek, is virtually non-existent. Most of the dime issues, which have a simpler design, are much easier to obtain in near-perfect condition.

The reverse of the Barber Dime, for example, exhibits an uncomplicated wreath of grain, with a ribbon and bow at the base, and the denomination enclosed in the center. Barber was also criticized for lack of originality with this motif, which is nearly identical to the previous Seated Liberty Dime reverse. Yet, with this design, as his others, the engraver took great pains with the relief and balance. Any hobbyist who has seen a Barber Dime worn smooth will quickly notice that the remaining outlines show a congruency unusual to modern coinage.

The reverse of the quarter and half dollar feature Barber's interpretation of the Great Seal of the United States. (Some hobbyists also liken the design to the reverse of a few Bust Quarter and Half Dollar varieties.) The coins display an eagle, with a shield of the United States on its breast, an olive branch of peace in its right talon and 13 arrows, representing the 13 original states, in its left. The eagle holds in its beak a scroll bearing the motto "E PLURIBUS UNUM." This scroll was probably the only problem Treasury officials had with Barber's designs. They complained that having it wind behind the eagle's neck, out of view, was "contrary to artistic principles." Barber, however, argued that if this was true, then it was also wrong to have the shield pass over the eagle's breast. In the end, both the scroll and the shield remained as he designed them.

For the reverse of the quarter and half dollar, Barber reworked the Great Seal of the United States, which was created by Dupre in 1790. This emblem is still used on the reverse of the one dollar bill, and on certain international documents signed by the President.

His heraldic eagle motif closely resembles the original Great Seal, designed by French medalist Dupre in 1790 to 1792. Barber first reworked this design in 1876 when he created the Indian Peace Medal. Interestingly, a modern version of the seal appears on the reverse of the one dollar bill, on the caps of enlisted men in the U.S. Army and Air Force, and on certain documents signed by the President of the United States.

During the 24 years that the three denominations bore Barber's designs, only the quarter was modified. During 1892, two reverse varieties were struck; one showing the eagle's wing tip over less than half the "E" in "UNITED STATES," and a second showing the wing tip over most of the "E." Also, in 1901, a new obverse hub for the quarter was introduced with slightly larger leaves for Liberty's ribbon. It is no coincidence that from this year on, Barber Quarters (particularly the reverses) are far more elusive in fully struck condition.

The famous 1894-S dime

Despite a minimum of varieties, the hobbyist interested in Barber coinage will find an alluring array of rarities. Of this silver triad, perhaps the most well-known is the 1894-S dime. Today, nearly a century later, the mystery surrounding this issue still goes unsolved.

According to coin expert Walter Breen, one theory presumes that 24 specimens were struck for Mintmaster Daggett and seven friends when he realized the San Francisco facility would not be required to produce dimes that year. Apparently, each person received three coins and Daggett passed his onto daughter Hallie. She is said to have bought ice cream with one, then put the others away until 1954, when she sold them to Earl Parker. Another faction claims that while 24 pieces were originally struck, 14 were distributed and the other 10 were recoined. Over the years, only a dozen have surfaced, all of which were reportedly struck as proofs. Currently, an 1894-S specimen is highly treasured and retails at more than $150,000.

Possibly the second most valuable coin in the Barber series is the 1901-S quarter, which commands well in excess of $30,000 when offered in MS-65 condition. Long referred to as "the king of the Barbers," this issue has a mintage of 72,644, which is the lowest in the quarter series. The tremendous notoriety of these coins has also a positive impact on both Barber Dimes and Half Dollars. A 1901-S specimen from either series is worth more than $7,500 in MS-65 condition.

Next in line behind the 1901-S quarter is probably the 1894-O dime, which easily retails at more than $7,500 in MS-65 condition. Other keys to the dime series are the 1895-O (lowest mintage), 1897-O, 1901-O, 1903-S and 1904-S. It is important to note that, of the three Barber denominations, the dimes are usually the most widely sought by collectors. This popularity is due in part to the fact that mintages were generally higher compared to the quarter and half dollar. Also, because of the lower denomination, dimes were hoarded more often. Despite an unusually strong collector demand for high-quality specimens, Uncirculated Barber Dimes are still relatively affordable and reasonably easy to locate.

For the quarter specialist, the 1913-S, with a mintage of only 40,000, enjoys the honor as the lowest regular mintage coin of any 20th century issue. A treasured MS-65 specimen is currently worth about $13,000. Other rare-date Barber Quarters include the 1896-S and 1913-S issues. This series, long viewed as undervalued, has experienced a burgeoning collector demand in recent years.

Barber Half Dollars also have their share of rarities, particularly the 1892-O "micro o." This variety resulted from an erroneously punched mintmark taken from 1892 quarter dies. Other keys to this series are the 1900-O, 1901-O, 1902-O, 1903-O, and 1904 O and S issues, all of which are valued in excess of $6,000 in MS-65 condition.

Many collectors are truly challenged by the task of assembling a date and/or mintmark set of Barber Half Dollars. They are extremely elusive in top condition, as coin writer Gene B. Edwards noted in a 1978 issue of the Coin Dealer Newsletter: "Barber Half Dollars are probably the most undervalued and difficult of the twentieth century series to assemble by date and mintmark in fully struck gem mint state . . . regardless of one's willingness to 'pay the price,' fully struck superb gems of some dates just do not surface."

Aside from the numismatic intrigue, Barber coinage has proven to be financially lucrative. For example, the 1968 Guidebook of U.S. Coins catalogues the "king" 1901-S quarter at $2,175 in Uncirculated condition, which is about one-fifteenth of its current market value. The 1895-O dime, listed then at $700 in Uncirculated condition, is now worth $2,000 - $7,500, depending on the grade of Mint State. In fact, this 1968 price guide catalogues more than half of the Barber Dime series at under $50 in Uncirculated condition. Most of these coins now retail in the $250 to $1,300 range.

In spite of an impressive financial history, many issues in the triad are still undervalued. This is evidenced by the fact that as the collector/investor demand mushrooms, several "better date" issues are emerging as scarce in top condition. Market analysts expect this trend to continue as more hobbyists appreciate the distinct qualities of Barber coinage.
